Autonomous Examination System – Overview

As an autonomous institution affiliated to Anna University, Mepco Schlenk Engineering College conducts its own internal and end-semester examinations independently. The examination system is designed around continuous assessment and a final end-semester evaluation. The college's autonomous status means that examinations, results, and evaluation are managed entirely within the institution rather than by Anna University directly.

Continuous Internal Assessment

Internal assessment is a critical component of the overall evaluation at Mepco. The following practices constitute the internal assessment mechanism:

- Periodical tests are conducted in all subjects throughout each semester.
- Assignments are given regularly and must be submitted on time.
- Performance in internal tests contributes to internal marks as per autonomous norms.
- Students who show poor academic progress are flagged, and parents are informed by the college administration.
- Attendance in classes also contributes to overall eligibility for examinations.

End-Semester Examinations

End-semester examinations are held at the end of each semester as per the autonomous examination schedule. These exams cover the full syllabus of each subject. The following condition must be met for a student to be eligible to sit for end-semester exams:

- Minimum 75% attendance must be maintained in each subject throughout the semester.
- Students failing to meet the attendance requirement are not permitted to appear in the end-semester examination for that subject.

Arrear Examinations and Supplementary Examinations

Students who fail in one or more subjects are required to clear their arrears in subsequent examination sessions. The following rules apply to arrear and supplementary examinations:

- Arrear courses from a previous semester must be cleared by paying the prescribed arrear examination fee.
- Failure to clear arrears can restrict a student's promotion to the next higher semester.
- A student who has already passed a subject cannot re-appear in the same subject for grade improvement.

Special Supplementary Examination (Post VIII Semester)

A special supplementary examination is conducted at the end of the final semester to give near-completion students a chance to clear pending arrears.

- Eligible students: Those with 1 or 2 arrears only in VII and VIII semesters.
- The exam is held immediately after the results of challenge valuation are published.

- Students with more than 2 arrears are not eligible for this special examination.
